Course Description (Calendar):

This course includes topics related to choices about the time individuals do not spend working. It deals with aspects of the economics of leisure and labour supply; the valuation of time; outdoor recreation; the economics of sports; the economics of dating and marriage; the economics of crime and the consumption of addictive goods; the economics of gambling and other addictive behaviour associated with the consumption of leisure, and the economics of the entertainment industry. Prerequisite: ECON 101. Three credits.

Course Goals:

The goal of this course is to use economic tools to understand how individuals spend their leisure time. We first develop a model of labour-leisure trade-off, and then examine economic issues associated with various industries in which individuals spend their leisure time. For instance, we will evaluate the video game and music industries, and evaluate the sports industry in depth. The course will use basic economic theory to evaluate issues related to leisure and the allocation of resources in sports and recreation, and statistical analysis to evaluate data used in the sports industry.

Optional Textbooks:

There is no required textbook for this course. I will make relevant class notes available, and many readings and resources will be available for free on the internet or through the library. The following materials will be available to you in the library:

Barro, R. (1990) Macroeconomics, 3rd Edition. HB 172.5 B36 (on reserve in the library)

Grafton, C. and P. Taylor (2000). Economics of Sport and Recreation. (Available as an e-book through the St. FX Library).

Parkin, M. and R. Bade (2015) Economics: Canada in the Global Environment, Pearson Canada. (Book used for Econ 101/102).

Fellows, C.M., G. Flanagan and S. Shedd (1997). Economic Issues: A Canadian Perspective (on reserve in Library)

Mansfield, E (1987) Statistics for Business and Economics: Methods and Applications, 3rd Edition. HA 29 M2463 1987 (on reserve in the library).

Field, B. (2008). Natural Resource Economics, 2nd Edition. Waveland Press.

The following optimal textbook may also be of use, but is not available at the library:
Leeds, M. and P. Von Allmen. The Economics of Sports. Routledge, 2016.

Several articles will also be discussed in class. Many of these articles can be found online, and are included in your reading list below.

Prerequisites: Econ 101

Grading:

Your final grade will be determined as follows:

Midterm 1	30%	Tuesday, Feb 14
Assignments	20%	Friday, February 3 and Tuesday, March 14
Final examination	50%	TBA

You will take one midterm test during the term. You will be tested on material from lectures, optional textbooks and any supplemental reading that may be assigned. You must write the final exam in order to pass the course. The final examination will be set by the examinations office and covers material from the entire course. You will also write two assignments in this course.

Policies:

Approach to the course and class participation: Students are expected to attend all classes and be present in class on time. For each topic, I will first provide some background economic analysis, which will be followed by a class discussion. Much of the background will come from my lecture notes, making class attendance extremely important. Lecture slides will be posted online, but will be incomplete. Students will be responsible for ALL material presented during lectures. Students are expected to prepare for each week of lectures by reading the assigned readings and are expected to actively engage in class discussions. Exam questions will typically consist of short answer questions and will require you to critically analyze issues using economic theory, as we will do during discussions in class.

Missed midterm exams: There will be no make-up midterm exams. If you miss the midterm exam and provide evidence of an illness, accident or family affliction, then the weight of the midterm will be placed on the final.

Travel Plans: Students are advised not to make travel plans until after the examination timetable has been finalized. Students who wish to finalize their travel plans at an earlier date should book flights that depart after the end of the examination period. There will be no special accommodation if travel plans conflict with the examination.

Plagiarism and Cheating: Students are expected to observe the same standards of scholarly integrity as their academic and professional counterparts. Students who are found to have engaged in unethical academic behavior, including the practices described on page 13-14 of the Calendar or available online at www.sites.stfx.ca/registrars\_office/academic\_integrity, are subject to penalty by the University.
